Low-income students who are engaged in the arts perform better academically and are more likely to attend college. In fact, their dropout rate is even lower than the national average for all students — regardless of socioeconomic status.

89% of the public agrees that arts are part of a well-rounded education. Our tools help you make a positive impact in your community.

Learn more at www.AmericansForTheArts.org.

Sources: National Endowment for the Arts’ The Arts and Achievement in At-Risk Youth (2012) and Americans for the Arts Public Opinion Poll (2016).