Understanding the Field of Arts Education

Learning in the arts enables every individual to develop the critical thinking, collaborative, and creative skills necessary to succeed in today’s ever-changing world. Americans for the Arts envisions a country where every child has access to—and takes part in—high quality learning experiences in the arts, both in school and in the community.

But it takes a village to provide a well-rounded education to every child. That’s where you come in. Use our 30+ page publication, The Arts Education Field Guide, to walk you through making those connections and partnerships that will strengthen arts education in your community.

Using The Arts Education Field Guide
Use this brochure to identify the decision-makers that you want to influence, and then refer to our full-length publication, The Arts Education Field Guide, to find information about that stakeholder and his or her relationship to the field of arts education. The Field Guide will help you understand each person’s motivations and connections in arts education, allowing you to build more effective relationships from the schoolhouse to the White House and from the living room to the boardroom.

You can use The Arts Education Field Guide to inform grantmaking; professional development for teachers, federal, state, and local policy; school board and administrator practice; parental advocacy; nonprofit leadership; and more.

Download it today at www.AmericansForTheArts.org/go/FieldGuide

Highlights from The Arts Education Field Guide
The Ecosystem of Partners, Players, and Policymakers in the Field of Arts Education

Look inside for your guide through the complex web of partners, players, and policymakers in the ecosystem of arts education.

Know who the key players and decision-makers are.

Find new allies.

Understand your relationship with other stakeholders in arts education.
Look inside for two different illustrations of the complex web of partners, players, and policy makers in the ecosystem of arts education. Know who the key players and decision makers are. Find new allies. Understand your relationship with other stakeholders in arts education.

This brochure summarizes each of the key players in arts education. But you can use our full length publication, The Arts Education Field Guide, to see what unique role each person plays in this ecosystem. Read more about how all of these players interact.

Download it today!
www.AmericansForTheArts.org/go/FieldGuide

1) Can we alter the flap pages? Here are my suggestions:
   a. make the flaps into one page with the same background color (I like the front page’s color best)
   b. make that page the same size as the others
   c. stretch the lines of text across the entire page

2) Can we take off “To connect the dots in this network…” on the bottom of the two inside pages?
Tiers of Influence

The structure of our education system is often seen as a linear hierarchy, but each partner below has a different role and a different amount of influence. Your strongest ally is not always just one step above, below, or beside you. How can we build more relationships within and between tiers in order to help arts education thrive within this ecosystem?

Spheres of Influence

This representation of the arts education field flips the power structure by putting students at the center, and it illuminates possible relationships between stakeholders. Who is already in your network? What new connections do you see? Who can become your new partner or ally?
Tiers of Influence
The structure of our education system is often seen as a linear hierarchy, but each partner below has a different role and a different amount of influence. Your strongest ally is not always just one step above, below, or beside you. How can we build more relationships within and between tiers in order to help arts education thrive within this ecosystem?

Spheres of Influence
This representation of the arts education field flips the power structure by putting students at the center, and it illuminates possible relationships between stakeholders. Who is already in your network? What new connections do you see? Who can become your new partner or ally?
Understanding the Field of Arts Education

Learning in the arts enables every individual to develop the critical thinking, collaborative, and creative skills necessary to succeed in today’s ever-changing world. Americans for the Arts envisions a country where every child has access to—and takes part in—high quality learning experiences in the arts, both in school and in the community.

But it takes a village to provide a well-rounded education to every child. That’s where you come in. Use our 30+ page publication, The Arts Education Field Guide, to walk you through making those connections and partnerships that will strengthen arts education in your community.

Using The Arts Education Field Guide

Use this brochure to identify the decision-makers that you want to influence, and then refer to our full-length publication, The Arts Education Field Guide, to find information about that stakeholder and his or her relationship to the field of arts education. The Field Guide will help you understand each person’s motivations and connections in arts education, allowing you to build more effective relationships from the schoolhouse to the White House and from the living room to the boardroom.

You can use The Arts Education Field Guide to inform grantmaking; professional development for teachers; federal, state, and local policy; school board and administrator practice; parental advocacy; nonprofit leadership; and more.

Download it today at www.AmericansForTheArts.org/go/FieldGuide

Highlights from The Arts Education Field Guide

Look inside for your guide through the complex web of partners, players, and policymakers in the ecosystem of arts education.
Know who the key players and decision-makers are.
Find new allies.
Understand your relationship with other stakeholders in arts education.

The Ecosystem of Partners, Players, and Policymakers in the Field of Arts Education